WORLD CRISIS IS SEEN AS ALLIES DEAL WITH POLES AND BOLSHEVIKI

Lloyd George Sees Peril To Warsaw And Sends Memoradum To Russians Proposing Terms Acceptable For Truce Between Waring Nations; Germans Accused Of Fomenting Trouble

(U.S. Naval Radio)

Hythe, August 9.—The Allied conference has reached a complete agreement on plans dealing with the Russian-Polish crisis. It includes a blockade, but on advice of experts, no allied troops will be employed.

Mr. Balfour was included in the conference at the final moment. It is understood that in the event of a final break the French will bear the land burden while the British handle the blockade.

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 9.—The latest Russian wireless note to Great Britain says that the Polish Government announces its readiness to send delegates to Minsk to conclude an armistice and peace preliminaries; the Bolshevik Government therefore expresses the belief that the object of the Allies, namely the cessation of hostilities and the establishment of peaceful relations between Russia and Poland on the basis of the full independence of Poland, will be attained most speedily and simply through direct negotiations.

The Bolshevik Government is of opinion that the Allies will undoubtedly acknowledge that their object will be fully covered by the inpending Russo-Polish conference at Minsk.

The contents of the above note are regarded as practically amounting to a rejection of Allied participation in the Russo-Polish settlement.

RUSSIAN ARMIES UNRULY

London, August 6.—The Times says: "The Soviet Russian reply to Great Britain's call for a halt in the advance in Poland is a refusal on the ground that the armies would not obey orders to halt and would only be content when they reached Warsaw, which was promised them as loot."

At Berlin, the Journal states Herr von Simons declared that the Reichstag and the Government were determined to prevent by every means in their power the Entente's sending troops through Germany to help Poland, by fighting, if necessary, to prevent the "violation" of German territory.

WOMEN PROTEST WAR

London, August 8.—Labor demonstrations have been arranged for today in many parts of England to protest against Allied help for Poland. The Women's Co-operative Guild, numbering 44,000 members, has issued a manifesto, declaring:

"We are not prepared to see our men sacrificed any longer to the ambitions and jealousies of governments."

SEEK AMERICA'S AID

Washington, August 8.—Exchanges of telegrams are actively continuing between Great Britain and France and Washington with regard to the tentative Allied suggestion of American aid to Poland. The details are carefully guarded.

Mr. Hugh S. Gibson, the American Minister to Poland, who is at present spending a holiday at Los [illegible], has been ordered to return to Warsaw.

POLES THANK FRENCH

Paris, August 9.—The Polish newspapers announce that the representatives of the rural districts of Warsaw, representing a population of 40,000 peasants, have sent the following address to the head of the French Military Mission:

"The representatives of the rural districts of Warsaw, on behalf of the peasants of the district of Warsaw express their respect and their eternal gratitude for the heroic and chivalrous assistance, which the officers of the French Mission are affording us in such difficult times."

DIPLOMATS CONFER

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, August 9.—The British and French Premiers met at Hythe yesterday and deliberated until 7 p.m. on the consequences of the refusal of the Soviet to suspend hostilities against the Polish army, as conveyed in a wireless message from Moscow.

They reached the conclusion that the Bolshevik Government was trying to gain time in order to occupy Warsaw and to set up a Polish Communist government there.

ASK MILITARY REPORT

The Premiers then proceeded to discuss the measures, demanded by the situation, and instructed the military experts to draw up a report, which will submitted to the Premiers this morning.

Marshal Foch, Field-Marshal Sir Henry Wilson and Admiral Earl Beatty worked until a late hour of the night concerting various measures which might be taken independently of a blockade.

PREMIER DELAYS TALK

Peasant Disturbances Are Reported In Territory Of Buffer State

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, August 9.—The Japanese report that peasant disturbances are occurring in several districts in Verkhne-Udinsk territory, compelling the Japanese Government to despatch troops to those districts.

The scarcity and inferior quality of foodstuffs is causing the desertion of Red soldiers, who frequently sell their uniforms to obtain food. A commission has been established to prevent desertions from the ranks of the Red Army.

HOPE FOR PEACE

The delegates of the Vladivostok Government have left Chita for Verkhne-Udinsk. When they interviewed General Semenoff, they found that their views almost agreed and they are, therefore, hopeful that a settlement will be reached.

Vladivostok, August 5.—Mr. Crozin, acting Minister of Justice, and Mr. Kruglikoff, acting Minister of the Interior have tendered their resignations for political consideration. Their resignations have been accepted by the President of the Cabinet. Mr. Beck, acting Minister of Agriculture is leaving the Cabinet for purely personal consideration. The President of the Cabinet has applied to the Social-Revolutionary party to fill the posts in the coalition Cabinet.

CONTINUE IN SEATS

The consent of the party has been obtained.

It is hoped that the ministerial crisis in Vladivostok will be settled. Though the ministers of the trading class have tendered their resignation they, however, continue to attend the sittings of the Cabinet and there is every evidence that a compromise will be found to the satisfaction of both parties.

EXTRADITION OF ALLEGED SLAYER WILL BE ASKED

Authorities To Apply That Yen Jui-sung Be Turned Over To Arsenal

DETAILS OF ARREST GIVEN

Salt Police Trace Suspect For Long Time Before He Is Captured

A formal application for the handing over of Yen Jui-sung, alleged murderer of the noted sing song girl, Lien Yin, to the Arsenal authorities for trial, will be made at the hearing of the case next Monday in the Mixed Court, it is understood. The application will be made on the ground that the murder was committed in Chinese territory—in a wheat field on a village near Siccawei.

The application is expected to be opposed by the defense.

Further details of the arrest of Yen have been given out by the salt police who effected the capture of the alleged slayer. According to the story, after the discovery of the body of the entertainer, Yen took refuge in a foreign firm on Hankow Road, staying on the roof by day and sleeping in a wardrobe by night.

SEES MOTHER-IN-LAW

Later, he succeeded in taking a junk and in going to the home of his mother-in-law in the Peh Yoh King Village, Kiangsu, where he secured a suit of ragged clothes and began to grow a mustache and a beard. His restlessness in a country village and his frequent visits to the teashop made other people inquisitive and the salt police in the village began their investigation of the stranger.

Yen was too smart to be discovered and he left the home of his mother-in-law under the pretext that he was sailing for Hangchow to pay his homage to the Buddhist Temples. The salt police followed him on the trip. Half a day from the village, the police became active and boarded his junk, but Yen was prepared. He jumped into the river and swam for life.

AGAIN LOCATED

Word were later received by the salt police that Yen was looking for a job in Hsuchowfu. Early this month, he was spotted near the railway station. One of the clever constables stepped forward and addressed him as Yen Lau-sze. Yen protested that his name was Shen, but he blushed at the same time.

A picture issued by the Shanghai Municipal Police was produced and his features compared favorably with those of the picture in spite of the additional mustache and beard.

Minister Of Foreign Affairs Sees Danger Of Causing Allies' Suspicion

Paris, August 9.—The German journal Die Freiheit publishes an interview with the German Minister for Foreign Affairs, Herr von Simons is stated to have declared himself ready, as soon as relations were resumed with the Soviet, to favor and facilitate the resumption of economic relations between Germany and Russia.

"I am firmly convinced" he added, "that German collaboration is necessary for the economic relief of Europe and I think it is my duty to warn the German people against the temptation, which may arise, to attach political hopes to a Russo-German entente. Such hopes would cause us to be suspected of wishing to elude our obligations under the Treaty of Versailles."

CHOLERA TAKES HEAVY TOLL IN JAPAN, REPORT

News Of Disease Is Being Suppressed Is Charge Of Travellers

Many deaths are taking place daily in Japan as a result of an epidemic of cholera, according to word brought to Shanghai yesterday by Americans who have recently visited Nippon. News of the epidemic has been suppressed by the government and recent issues of the newspapers there have contained no accounts of the ravages of the disease but the situation is said to be serious.

News of the epidemic is of particular interest in Shanghai at this season as many residents of the Settlement are planning to spend vacations in Japan.

The returned travellers say that the disease has been particularly virulent in Kobe and Nagasaki and that the toll has been very heavy. It was impossible, however, for foreigners to obtain any exact figures as to the death rate because of the secrecy imposed upon the press and public by the officials.

TO BREAK MONOPOLY

Britons' Control Of Company At Barbados Factor In Controversy

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 9.—Five United States destroyers are patroling the Florida coast off Miami with orders from President Wilson to prevent the British cable-ship Colonia, from landing the cable, which the Western Union Telegraph Company is laying to Barbados to connect with the British cable from Barbados to South America.

It is explained that the American Government's action is being taken in order to prevent the landing of the cable before the meeting of the International Communications Congress at Washington on September 15.

BRITISH MONOPOLY

The State Department says that a British cable company has the virtual monopoly of cable rights in Brazilian waters, although an American concern wishes to construct a direct line from the United States to Brazil.

Action has therefore been deferred upon the Western Unions Company's application for permission to land its Barbados cable on the Florida coast, pending the settling of the question whether the terms of its contract with the British company would not further extend the British monopoly.

CHINA SEEN AS GREAT FACTOR IN COAL WORLD

Far East Gets Opportunity When England's Output Is Cut Down

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 7.—The Coal Association says that the Danish State Railways' order of Chinese coal and the forthcoming delivery at Marseilles of 100,000 tons of Chinese coal marks the opening of a fresh epoch in the history of the world's coal industry.

The reduced English output has given China her chance and there are few people, who realise the enormous extent of China's mineral resources and the important part China may play as a coal-producing nation. It has been realised in Germany and the German technical papers during the last few months have been giving much attention to this subject.

Son Of Parliamentarian Murdered By Korean Here

Sixteen-Year-Old Youth Stabbed To Death As He Attempts To Stop Row Between Slayer And Ricsha Coolie

In an attempt to mediate a quarrel between a young Korean and a ricsha puller, Mau Sung-hauan, son of Mr. Mau Yung-hsun, a member of the old Parliament, was stabbed in the heart by the Korean with a knife and died instantly at 10 o'clock Monday night on Rue Marcell Tillet.

The Korean, who resides at 63 Wu Hsin Lee on Rue Marcell Tillet, has been arrested by the French police together with one of his four brothers who lived with him. The victim lived in a house opposite that of the Koreans at 28 Pao Kang Lee.

Eye witnesses say that the Koreans were in the habit of beating up ricsha coolies and maltreating hawkers since they took up residence here several years ago. Neighbors have tried to reason with them, but in vain.

REFUSES TO PAY COOLIE

The victim especially had occasion to argue with the men from the Hermit Kingdom and urge them to behave. Monday night, the slayer had just dismounted from a ricsha and had refused to pay the coolie when a scene was created. There was much commotion and young Mau came out of his home to mediate.

When he saw the Korean assault the ricsha coolie, Mau intervened and told the Korean to pay the coolie and let him go. Without a word, the Korean pulled out a knife and stabbed the Chinese in the heart. Death was instantaneous.

JOINT INQUEST TODAY

A joint inquest will be held today by the Chinese, Japanese and French authorities. A great deal of indignation has been created among the Chinese residents in the district by the sanguine act. A near riot ensued, but the slayer succeeded in escaping from the angry mob.

French police yesterday succeeded in arresting the alleged murderer.

Young Mau was a student of the Nanyang Railway and Mining Engineering College and was one of the most popular figures on the campus. His fellow students are planning to hold a memorial service in his honor and will demand severe punishment of the culprit.

HANGCHOW IS DRY FOR DAY AS U.S. PARTY INSPECTS CITY

JUICE OF GRAPE

But 'Tis Not The Kind That Boasts Of Any Authority

ONE GETS WET

Legislator Dyer Falls In Lake To Break Official Drouth

"Hangchow gave a reception to the big party of American legislators that was nothing short of astonishing," was the declaration of a member of the party, now in Nanking on its way to Peking, but after he had voiced this enthusiastic expression, a shade of something that faintly resembled disappointment crossed his face.

"But they seemed to be under an—er—misapprehension," he added.

Asked what this was he seemed at a loss to answer and again asserted that the trip to Hangchow was "simply wonderful," and in this view he was joined by all the members of the big party numbering about 70 persons.

GREAT RECEPTION

Expressions heard from members of the party and from others who accompanied it after the return to Shanghai and before the visitors started for Nanking indicate that Hangchow set out to outdo itself and all other places in the matter of entertainment for the American legislators. Possibly some detail may have been overlooked, but in any event Hangchow's reception long will be remembered.

The special train arrived at Hangchow about 11 o'clock Monday morning and from the time of arrival until about 10 o'clock that night the visitors found something doing every minute, according to all reports. If any least detail of entertainment was overlooked certainly nobody in the party said so. They all had a wonderful time.

The special train came to a stop to the strains of a military band and at the station the visitors were greeted by General Lu Yung-hsiang and his staff accompanied by Foreign Commissioner Wang Sin-san and staff, besides a gathering of Chinese dignitaries.

ALL SMILES

The arrivals were escorted to decorated and beribboned private ricshas which set off through flag draped streets with bells tinkling. There were more than a hundred of these ricshas with their waving American and Chinese flags and it was apparent that the whole city had been dressed for the occasion and the meanest coolie seemed to know that the Americans had arrived for smiling welcome met them everywhere.

The party was taken from the train to the Military Club and here a tiffin, in reality an elegant banquet, was served by Governor Lu. It was apparent at this initial affair that the Chinese of Hangchow follow closely the unfolding of events in the United States, so closely, in fact, that the mere statement of a former American Secretary of State, made some years ago and the subject of some little press comment at that time, was remembered.

DRINK GRAPE JUICE

So it happened that grape juice was served at the tiffin, and thereafter through the course of the visit. The hospitable Chinese, of course, acquainted with the news that prohibition had overtaken the United States, felt naturally enough that it was fitting for the occasion, for this day of days, that Hangchow should be dry—in deference to the wishes of these American legislators. Grape juice therefore was the beverage served.

Formal welcome was given to the visitors at the tiffin by Tuchun Lu and by Commissioner Wang and responses were made by Senator William J. Harris of Cedartown, Georgia and by Congressman John H. Small of Washington, North Carolina.

Following the tiffin the fleet of gayly beribboned ricshas again came into service and a jaunt to points of interests through the city brought the party to the green shore of West Lake.

Here a great swarm of sampans, a mass of colored bunting and flags, awaited the visitors. The little boats were so decorated that they resembled gondolas and each was manned by boatmen fore and aft. The decorated sampan fleet swept over the sunlit waters of the shallow lake to the grassy opposite shore where a new surprise awaited the travelers in the shape of sedan chairs.

MORE REFRESHMENTS

The members of the party were borne up the hill side to the Lin Yin Monastary with frequent stops along the way and everywhere a stop was called more grape juice was served. In fact at the temple and at all the numerous stops that were made through the afternoon after the visitors had recrossed the lake grape juice was the beverage most plentifully supplied and then as a variation cups of the famous Dragon Well tea, soda water and ice cream were provided to supply every want.

In the afternoon the visitors inspected the noted Wai Tzun Silk factory and the big closing event of the day was a banquet at the headquarters of the Silk Guild of Hangchow where a program of Chinese music and speeches by members of the Provincial Assembly, Provincial Educational Society and General Chamber of Commerce was given and addresses in response were made by Congressmen Osborne and Campbell and by Mr. Julean Arnold, Commercial Attache of the American Legation at Peking.

The single untoward event of the day occurred as the party was arriving from the trip across the lake and it was altogether trifling. Congressman L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, Missouri, while stepping out of his sampan lost his footing and fell into the lake. After he had climbed back into the boat he was taken to the home of Mr. S. K. Chen, Secretary of the Changchow Foreign Bureau, where he was supplied with dry apparel.

Among those from Shanghai who accompanied the party were Postmaster E. H. Everett, Mr. H. B. Campbell of the Du Pont Company and Mr. George A. Fitch, Secretary of the Y.M.C.A.

JAPANESE FIND OPIUM PLOT IN KOBE AND HERE

Smuggler Arrested And Tells Of Connections With Shanghai Men

The Aioibashi Police arrested a suspicious character here a few nights ago, says the Kobe Herald. The man's name is Sato Umenosuke (28) and he says he has been employed on one of the N.Y.K.'s Shanghai steamers. He hails from Fukushima Prefecture.

He has confessed that he was carrying a loaf of opium weighing over 3 kamme, which he says he received from a friend named Murayama Kakunosuka, of Hiogo. Subsequently three other men—Matsutake Nagashige, Midzushima Shinichi and Hayashi Nisaku—were arrested. All of these were engaged in smuggling opium and morphine; working, it is said, in conjunction with a certain Sudzuki at Shanghai and a firm called Miyada Yoko there.

IN BOMBAY AND JAPAN

This nefarious business has been carried on from Bombay as well as Japan, it appears.

The Police have been very active during the past few days, and have now arrested a Chinese named Rio Sui-kow (66) a native of Kwantung Province, living in Moto Machi, Nichome.

This man admits being connected with a certain Chinese principal residing in Nanking Machi.

Following upon these arrests, detectives have raided some houses in the Chinese quarter, where a number of undesirable characters are known to congregate, and seized a number of articles.

As the smuggling business here appears to have widespread ramifications, the Police are likely to be engaged in their investigations for some time to come.

ing and will leave immediately for Versailles.

Mr. Lloyd George's statement on the Russian situation in the House of Commons has been postponed until tomorrow.

WARSAW OBJECTIVE

London, August 8.—The situation is extremely grave and the Hythe Conference has no doubt that the Bolsheviks mean to capture Warsaw and then to establish a Soviet Government there.

It is confirmed that Mr. Lloyd George presented a memorandum to M. Kameneff on Friday regarding the terms of a proposed truce, with the object of enabling terms of peace between Russia and Poland to be discussed.

It was proposed that a truce should be declared for ten days from midnight, of August 9-10 and that orders should be issued from Moscow and Warsaw that the Polish and Russian armies should halt on the line on which they stand and cease fighting.

TERMS OF TRUCE

The memorandum guaranteed that during the period between the cessation of hostilities, and the signature of peace the Allies would not take steps to send troops to Poland or to supply the Polish armies with war material.

It was also agreed that the Soviet should be allowed to send representatives behind the Polish lines in order to satisfy themselves that no reinforcements or war material were being supplied to Poland.

The memorandum further stipulated that on the cessation of hostilities, the Russian and Polish armistice delegates should meet to define a line of demarcation between the Soviet and Polish armies until the conclusion of peace and to draw up the conditions of an armistice as a preliminary to peace negotiations.

WILL MAKE OWN PACT

Several messages have now been received from the Moscow Government, which has definitely declined to agree to the proposed terms. The Bolsheviks declare that they are meeting the Poles on Wednesday and that they prefer to make their own arrangements with the Poles.

The Hythe Conference has therefore referred the matter to its naval and military advisers who will present a report tomorrow, when the Conference will consider what action shall be taken in the circumstances.

Mr. Lloyd George is deferring his statement in the House of Commons until Tuesday. The French delegation is expected to leave Hythe tomorrow afternoon.

THIRD GERMAN NOTE

Paris, August 7.—The newspapers state that Germany has addressed a third note to the Entente concerning the necessity for defending East Prussia.

The note declares that, with the object of maintaining order, a militia force has "simultaneously formed itself" in the vicinity of the frontier, and that the German Government have taken the force over, and are centralising its organisation.

The note reiterates the request for sanction to despatch troops to the frontier, "in view of the departure of certain Allied contingents."

MOSCOW DECLINES MESSAGE

Warsaw, August 7.—It is officially stated that the Moscow wireless station twice declined to receive the latest Polish note. The Moscow station's pretext on the first occasion was alteration in the hours for reception of messages, and on the second atmospheric disturbances, which the Poles declare were non-existent.

CABINET CONVENED

London, August 9.—An official communique issued at Lympne (Hythe) at 12:30 p.m. today states that the Conference is still sitting but the arrangements hold for the departure of M. Millerand and Marshal Foch at 2:30 p.m.

Mr. Lloyd George has summoned a Cabinet meeting for six o'clock this evening at Downing Street, when he will lay the whole situation before his colleagues.

GERMANS MAKE THREATS

London, August 7.—Germany is watching the Polish crisis as eagerly as the Entente. The keynote of her policy was struck by a brief and startling speech by the Foreign Minister, Herr von Simons, in the Reichstag today in the course of which he declared that he would use his utmost powers to prevent any infringement of German neutrality by the transpoprt of Entente troops to Poland and hinted in an almost threatening tone at Franco-German tension.

The German newspapers express entire approval of this policy.

The excitement produced in Germany by this speech, is somewhat lessened by the belief that the Allies, realising that any endeavor to transport arms and munitions through Germany will evoke wholesale sabotage and obstruction, to say nothing of armed resistance, will abstain from such an attempt.

Still the German papers do not conceal their satisfaction at the breakdown of the Polish buffer between Germany and Russia and the collapse of one of the main pillars of the Treaty of Versailles.

CONFERENCES SILENT

Hythe, August 8 4:30 p.m.—Two messages have been received from Moscow at Lympne where the Conference is being held. Neither of them is definite in character but both indicate that the Soviet will refuse the proposed terms.

Hythe, August 8, 7 p.m.—The Conference is still sitting. No news has leaked out with regard to the deliberations. It is believed that the conference will last the whole of tomorrow.

GERMANS ACCUSED

London, August 8.—Indications are growing in strength that Germany is seeking to intensify Poland's difficulties. Following on Herr von Simon's speech yesterday, a notable manifesto signed by all classes of German Socialists, was issued. Referring to the growing rumors that Allied troops are concentrating on the Rhine, the manifesto calls upon the German workers to use every means in there power to prevent the passage of troops and munitions through Germany to Poland.

Concurrently the Echo de Paris publishes the text of a German note to Poland, calling attention to collisions between Poles and Germans in ex-German territory and requesting steps to prevent the aggravation of the friction.

TRY TO PICK QUARREL

The Echo de Paris regards the note as reflecting the desire to pick a quarrel on the same lines as that between Austria and Servia in 1914.

A telegram from Warsaw states that speculation is rife regarding the object of the note and the alleged incidents, in view of the fact that order has been remarkably well maintained in the area complained of. It is suggested that the Germans are seeking a pretext to occupy Polish Pomerania.

POLISH SOCIALISTS APPEAL

London, August 7.—The Polish Socialists have issued an impassioned counterblast to the anti-Polish manifestoes of the British and other Labor Parties, imploring them to "oppose the national murder which is being perpetrated on Poland by the Red Army, whose object is the ruin of the independence of their neighbors, as has already been done with Lithuania and the Ukraine." The manifesto concludes with the words:

"Who dares reproach the Poland Socialists with wishing to save the independence of their country?"

PEACE OR WAR

London, August 8.—Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Curzon, Field-Marshal Sir Henry Wilson and other British experts have arrived at Hythe. An optimistic feeling prevails with regard to the nature of the Russian reply which is expected during the course of the day but a sense of uncertainty will remain until its receipt. The Diplomatic Correspondent of the "Observer" exactly defines the position when he says:

"By evening we shall know whether it will be peace or war."

The Poles continue to issue voluminous communiques, from which it is gathered that they are busily engaged in repulsing Bolshevik attacks on various sectors and frequently making counter-attacks.

TAKE GLOOMY VIEW

Hythe, August 8 4 p.m.—No reply to the British note had been received up to 2.15 p.m. but there are indications that the Soviet will not accept the latest British proposal for ten day's truce. The position is regarded as gloomy.

The aforementioned proposal which reached Moscow yesterday morning, is on the basis that neither the Poles, the Soviet nor the Allies shall improve their military position during the ten days pending steps to conclude peace.

M. Millerand and his party arrived at Folkestone at 9.30 this morning and were welcomed by Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Curzon and Earl Beatty.

The Conference sat until 1.15 p.m. when it adjourned for lunch.

Mr. Balfour has arrived at Hythe.

NO ACTION BY U.S.

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Washington, August 9.—Although press dispatches received here indicate the gravity of the Polish situation as increasing there is still no indication that the American government has reached any decision on proposals of aid presented by the Polish government or of helping the Poles as outlined by the British and French governments. The exchange of notes with London and Paris continues.

London, August 9.—Wireless reports from Moscow state that the Polish government is leaving the capital for Karish today.

The Bolsheviki have apparently broken the Polish lines near the East Prussian frontier. Soviet cavalry patrols have advanced in a great encircling movement north of Warsaw.

BOLSHEVIKI ADVANCING

London, August 9.—Bolsheviki have entered the town of Sokolow, 40 miles Northeast of Warsaw, and are planning to go on to Karish after they capture Warsaw. According to a Moscow wireless report sent out Sunday they occupied a number of centers South of Brest-Litvosk.

DEPOSED ANFU LEADERS GIVEN HAVEN BY JAPAN

Former Political Dictators Allowed Refuge Within Peking Legation

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, August 10.—The Japanese Legation has handed to Reuter the following copy of a note from Mr. Obata, addressed to the Chinese Foreign Minister yesterday:

"Acting on instructions from my government, I have the honor to inform your Excellency that Messrs. Hsu Shu-tseng, Tseng Yu-chun, Tuan Chih-kuei, Ting Shi-yuan, Chu Shen, Wang Chi-lung, Liang Hung-chi, Yao Chen and Yao Kuo-chen, having thrown themselves one after another into this Legation, seeking refuge, and this Legation having felt compelled, in consideration of International practice, well established especially in China, to give them due protection, it has been decided to render them accommodation in the compound of the Legation Guard.

They have been at the same time strictly warned entirely to refrain during their sojourn from concerning themselves in any way in politics. Moreover they are placed entirely in isolation from outside.

"In communicating the above information to Your Excellency, I am confident that your government will readily understand that this action of my Legation is clearly apart from any political significance and that the refuge, now given to the above-mentioned individuals, is no more a special favor, due to any consideration of the political faction of which they are members, than it is possible for the Legation to refuse shelter to them simply because they do not belong to any other factions."

FOREIGN CAPITAL WILL BE USED TO AID RUSSIA

Forestry, Fisheries, Mines And Oil Will Be Leased For Exploitation

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, August 4.—The absence of Russian capital necessary for the development of Russian industry in the Far East in full measure on the one hand and the lack of the necessary contingent of Russian enterprises on the other makes it utterly important that foreign capital be called in to participate in the work of developing Russian industry in this region.

To make Russian interests safe in the region, the following project, worked out by the Council of Ministers has been brought forward to Parliament for discussion and ratification.

A committee made up of representatives of the Departments of Finance, Trade and Industry, Agriculture and State Control, presided over by a man especially appointed to this post by the Council of Ministers is to be formed to work out stipulations providing for the lease to foreign exploitation of forestry, fisheries, various deposits of oil, mineral ore, gold and so on.

Shan-Hai-Kwan

Peitaiho, August 7.—China has many famous cities lying upon the shores of her eastern seas, but none more famous as a battle-ground than Shan-kai-kwan, the barrier city between north Chihli and Manchuria. Long before Peking became the capital of all China, armies of Manchus, of Mongolians, of even Koreans, marched and fought back and forth over the plains on either side of this narrow frontier barrier.

The Mountain (Shan) lies but a few miles back from the shores of the Sea (Hai), allowing but these few miles of space for the multitudes to pass back and forth to the wider plains on either side. The eastern end of China's fifteen hundred mile long Great Wall terminates at this place, dipping its nose into the sea; and we wonder if this portion was not the first part built by the then emperor.

If there were no other evidence that ancient China knew nothing about surveying and straight lines, this Great Wall would be a sufficient witness. Even over the three miles of plain between the city and the sea this Wall curves about as though uncertain whether to start for the city or make a run for some point farther east. At the seaside it creeps along the shore for a distance as though wishing to find a better place for a bath.

RANKS WITH PEKING GATES

It rises in its majesty when it reaches the city. The eastern Gate of Shanhaikwan will rank well with some of the Peking gates. Over its towering walls successive generations of caravans have read the characters "The First Great Barrier on Earth." That stands as a witness of how important did the Chinese consider this gateway to the north east.

From the city the Wall passes on toward the great mountains in the background. It climbs their sides and then like a wild mountain goat jumps from peak to peak, as though still undecided whether to go west or north. The builder could have saved miles of ground and probably thousands of coolie lives had he held the wall to the plains below and just swung them around the base of those mountains. But the emperor was safe in his capital and the contractors were after a squeeze and the more miles they could find and the higher peaks they could scale, the greater the amount they could claim for their old age pensions.

WAS FRONTIER POST

Long ages ago Shanhaikwan was a frontier post manned with the bronzed soldier of the northern sandy deserts: but after 1900 the Legations in Peking changed all this by placing soldiers of Europe to occupy these barracks on the sea. They just rode down the Peking-Mukden line and squatted on the grounds. They brought along some cottonwood and willow and stuck them into the ground and lo! forests covered the sand dunes and shady macadam roads stretched themselves under the cool branches. The bricks of the old wall, which had been slowly metomorphosing into houses for the peasant farmers, now speedily became barracks for European soldiers. It was hard on the Wall but it insured that the railroad would not stop its running every time the Chinese wanted a clan-fight.

In this city the natural footed Manchu woman meets her bound footed sister and they live side by side as friends. Each still holds to their ancestral form of hair dressing. The men of the two lines are not so easily separated. This northern country with its sands, its treeless wastes and its hot summer sun; bronzes them all until their yellow is lost and they resemble America's red man.

BROAD THOROUGHFARES

The northern carts compel every city into which they come and go to have broad gates and bridges and broader streets. Their extending axles are liable to catch any unwary coolie and send him and his load sprawling. So the people and their tables and their awnings are compelled to creep back from the center of Shanhaikwan's streets. Before the railroad came the customs house just inside the East Gate must have witnessed many a jam while the great caravans waited to be examined. Carts and pack animals still come and go but nothing like those days as the numerous inns with their broad gates still testify.

The city is filled with flat roofed one story buildings. This type of architecture, spreads itself across northern China to Szechuen and Thibet and then strikes south into Yunnan. Heavy roof timbers are covered with reeds and this in turn is plastered thick with mud and lime. It is slightly curved that the rains, when they fall, may run off the quicker. They have not been much needed this year. Stream beds are dry and furrowed with months of cart tracks. Light rains have combined with the water holding loess soil to shoot up the corn, millet and broomcorn; but one wonders what would be a normal crop could there be forests on the mountains and hills and the waters be held back to flow down into the plains more leisurely.

RICH COAL MINES

Until one has been in this region he does not realise that here took place one of the silent battles against old and conservative China.

Chinwangtao, lying half way between Peitaiho and Shanhaikwan, is the seaport for the great coal mines of North Chihli. It was that this coal might be gotten to the sea that permission was gained to run the first portion of the Peking-Mukden railway from the mines to Chinwangtao; only the railroad was not then known by that name and no Chinese dreamed of its ever connecting the capitals of China and Manchuria. That first short line was so convenient that it was lengthened to other places and almost before fossilised China knew it, they were traveling with despatch and ease from the one city to the other. It has been largely by just such means that the old China has been changed. If the Japanese will let them alone, may be there is still hope for those who still believe in the antiquated method of ruling, namely, "Let him take who has the power, and let him keep who can."

'UPSON DOWNS' DOWN DODGE'S BOLSHIES BY SCORE OF FOUR TO NOTHING AND EVEN UP SERIES WITH TWO FOR E CH

Tink Has Opponents Eating Out Of His Hand Like Tame Rabbits Throughout Matinee; Feud Is Postponed Until Tomorrow When Real Battle Takes Place

By Viola Verclaire

In one of the snappiest games played here this year, the Regulars, with "Kid" Tinkham pitching for them, shut out the Bolsheviki. It was a fine game of baseball and the fans who ventured out to the Race Club grounds yesterday were very well satisfied with their afternoon's recreation.

The game went along until the fourth inning before a score was made and everybody had settled back in their seats with the expectation of an extra inning affair, when the Regulars went on the war path and scored two runs. This was enough to win, but they kept up their good work and scored one in the fifth and one more in the sixth.

The best the Bolsheviki could do was 'scote eggs,' as "Tink" had them eating out of his hand like tame rabbits all during the matinee.

The next game between these two teams will be played on Thursday afternoon at 5:00 p.m. It will probably be the best game of the year as the two teams are now tied.

The Bolsheviki will no doubt pitch their star heaver, Claire, in order to 'cop' this game and the Regulars are pretty sure to use Tinkham as it strengthens their team considerably, to have the hard hitting Porterfield on the infield.

It is going to be a tough battle all the way in the next two games, in order to see who will get the Gillette safety razors, offered by "Trotsky" Dodge for the winning team.

Just Dope

They say "A change of pasture makes fat calves." Maybe that applies to pitchers, for "Kid" Tinkham, playing his first game for the Regulars, against his old teammates, certainly looked like a new man.

It begins to look as though Porterfield was going to cop those cigarettes offered by the Westminster Tobacco Co., for the best hitter in this series. He has been leading both teams, and certainly didn't hurt his average, yesterday, when he got two hits out of three times up, one a three bagger.

"Smithy" celebrated his return by banging out a three bagger, although he got out at home, trying to stretch it.

TIENTSIN TO OPEN SERIES HERE AUG. 20

Nine Games On Card With Double Headers As Week-end Feature

(By Viola Verclaire)

Doc. Downs, manager of the Shanghai baseball club, is in receipt of a telegram from the Tientsin baseball club, saying they will arrive here on August 19, to open a nine game series, starting August 20.

Double headers will be played on Saturdays and Sundays, if a third team can be had to enter this series. Doc. has been trying to get the Dairen Japanese team, but so far has heard nothing from them. If they can't come, probably there can be a strong team made up from the local Japanese teams. It is understood that they have some very fine ball players in their colony.

This will be a very expensive undertaking on the part of the local baseball club, and in order to meet the expenses, the following prices have been agreed upon. Present Club members $5.00, Ladies $5.00, Non-members of the Club $10.00. Provided the Municipal Council will give their consent.

As nine games will be played, this is not considered expensive, averaging about $1.00 per game for non-members and $.50 for ladies and members.

Tickets are now being printed and will be obtainable before the last of the week.

Everybody should turn out and make this series a success, as it certainly stands for the championship of the East.

Golf Rules Too Hard To Understand, Says Expert

By JOHN G. ANDERSON

New York, July 20.—Every six months or so we feel constrained to write upon the signs of the times in golfdom, since the future outlook changes almost with the seasons. In past years it has not always been a simple matter to form judgments, but the summing up of the golf history of the last twenty or more weeks assures us of many worth while facts in so far as they relate to our own future action. Let us tabulate a few.

1. The encouragement which junior golfers are getting from sectional organisations the past few months is a life saver for American golf. There never has been a second Travis, and we doubt if there ever will be; there may be other Bobby Joneses, because of intelligent action on junior title play which will force clubs to sanction more play by their junior members.

2. Taken by and large the caddying of the thousands upon thousands of boys throughout the United States has never been worse. They carry the bag, sit on the benches left for the players, rarely find a ball hit into the rough, don't care if they do lose a ball, take no interest in the player and his game even if the member takes interest in them, and think more often than not of the sized tip they would like to demand of their employer. Moreover, they are paid more money than ever. Clubs are beginning to work out the problem, perhaps one club in ten. When the ratio gets five out of ten the future will appear more rosy.

3. The rules discussion of the past six months has awakened intelligent inquiry among golfers who hitherto cared little for the printed word. If nothing is done across the water there will be a maximum of good accomplished here through the fostered discussions. Speaking of the present day code, Arthur Crabb sends in the following suggestions, which deserve a reading:

"It seems to me that the present day rules are like a beautiful woman with a glorious figure carelessly and dowdily dressed. The mass of golfers do not know the rules because they are in such complicated form. They should be rearranged and clarified, with each rule under different subdivisions, covering all kinds of matches, with excellent illustrations of examples following each rule. When it comes to rules golfers are children, and we know how valuable illustrations were in our school books.

RULES ARE NOT ENFORCED

"Most of the questions of rules raised by the players are due to the lax enforcement of the rules themselves as they now stand by the clubs' officials. Boundaries, hazards and the like are not clearly defined or are carelessly defined. A man who actually knows the rules and suggests that the only way to play is to follow them is looked upon as being more or less of a crank. Here are a few live wire illustrations of what has been attempted in the recent past by those ignorant, not only of rules but of fair play:

"In a city championship qualifying round five men tied for the last four places and the officials solemnly called the five together for the purpose of eliminating one by matching pennies. Some one suggested that usually golf championships were conventionally won on the golf course and not on the turn of a coin, and under pressure the committee consented to have the players play for the places.

"A committee printed the following rule and posted it: 'The road on the sixteenth hole is a hazard, and if a ball is lifted there in it must be dropped in the hazard.' Heaven only knows what the idea was.

4. The membership plan of a club selling certificates at a thousand dollars or more has swept the country and has put the game upon the most lasting and solid foundation. There can be little encroachments from now on at any of the hundreds of golf clubs situated near Metropolitan centers.

5. Prize money for professional events has almost doubled in the past year.

6. Persistency in keeping at a thing is noted in the recent letter received from Lord Northcliffe with respect to Abe Mitchell who after all will be present at Inverness the coming August for the open championship. A hundred obstacles were put in the way, but the officials would not be downed. The galleries will be the largest in the history of golf in this country because of their stick-to-it methods.

NEED FOR CLEARING HOUSE

7. The need for a clearing house for golf dates was never more clearly exemplified. There should be a meeting of all the big sectional golf heads in conjunction with the national body soon after the annual meeting in January at which will be chosen the courses and times for play.

8. Clubs are limiting their membership to 250 or 300 at the outside because the members nowadays are all golfers and crowd the links on the week-ends.

9. International matches should be the outcome of all the chatter about them which has been held in the past half year, especially as the U. S. G. A. committee now abroad will take up this question with the British golfers. In fact, the only obstacles have been the expenses and the need for having each year a thoroughly representative team. But with every other year an "at home" affair this ought not to stand in the way.

10. The amateur cracks, Jones and Evans, have already engaged rooms at Inverness, and their friends state that they are to be considered as foremost candidates for the crown of open champion fully on a par with any of the star professional golfers. They both ought to finish in the money if the reports of the past few weeks are indicative of their play at Toledo. Jones never played so well in his life as he is doing now.

11. The demand by the U. S. G. A. officials that all large pools be abolished and gamblers and gambling be frowned upon is the best step forward in golfing ranks for some time. It was about time that action of this sort were taken, for the attendant evils would have spread.

HONGKONG TENNIS MEN WILL PLAY SHANGHAI STARS

Proposal To Hold Interport Matches Acted On By Meeting Favorably

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, August 10.—At a meeting, held yesterday evening the representatives of the Hongkong Tennis and Cricket Club considered the letter from the Secretary of the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association, with regard to the proposal for inter-port lawn tennis matches.

The meeting agreed to the general principle of holding tennis matches as suggested by Shanghai and a sub-committee was appointed to discuss the details.

It was decided to inform the Shanghai Association that Hongkong would be glad of a visit in November.

The formation of a Hongkong Lawn Tennis Association was also agreed upon and it was decided to apply to the Shanghai Association for a copy of their rules.

How Smart Play Lost Ball Game

Sometimes a smart play will lose a ball game.

When the Cardinals were at Ebbets Field (Brooklyn) recently, the versatile Clarence Mitchen was subbing in left field for Zach Wheat. "Tub" Clemons, the heavyweight catcher, was on second when the next batter hit a single to left.

Mitchell came in fast on the ball and made a beautiful pick up. He figured, like a smart player would, hoping that he would catch Clemons as the catcher rounded third.

As it was Clemons did round third at full speed, but instead of the St. Louis coach holding him up he let him continue on to the plate. And the St. Louis catcher was fast enough to beat Johnston's throw to the plate.

If Mitchell had made the throw to the plate he would have easily caught Clemons. But he thought quickly and his quick thinking gave the game to the Cardinals, as the run Clemons brought over the plate proved to be the winning one.

FAMOUS CRICKETER GIVES VALUABLE TIPS ON FINE POINTS OF THE GAME AND RECALLS FATE OF "LITTLE JOE"

George Parr Urges Youngsters To Pay More Attention To Umpire, And To Study Constantly, In Order That Their Game May Be Improved

By The Gentleman In Black

Speaking of decisions reminds me of what George Parr used to say to young cricketers.

"When you play in a match," he would observe, "be sure not to forget to pay a little attention to the umpire. First of all inquire after his health, then say what a fine player his father was, and finally present him with a brace of birds or rabbits. This will give you confidence, and you will probably do well."

Old George understood the finer points of the game as thoroughly as most people.

Friends have often said to me, "Why do you devote all your time, thought, and energies to the game? You must find it very monotonous."

My reply is invariably to the effect that one is always learning something new about it. Nobody ever has been, or ever will be, able to declare that he knows everything about cricket.

BYWAYS UNCHRONICLED

How many people, for instance, could have acted on their own initiative on the lines suggested by Parr? It required a man of much experience, and one, moreover, who was a good judge of human nature, to hold such views. And the more one associates with cricketers the more one learns. We obtain some particulars of the actual play from the papers, of course, but much of interest—what Felix called the byways strewn with pretty flowers—is often unchronicled.

Let me give just one instance. It shall be one referring to Joe Hardstaff, a good cricketer and a worthy man, who takes his benefit this year. About eighteen years ago he played an innings of 140 for Notts Club and Ground, and the next day received a wire inviting him to assist the County at Lord's.

He had never been to London before, and when he arrived there it was midnight. The hotel to which he was recommended was full, and he was grateful in being allowed to sleep with the boots.

KEPT HIM OUT

The next morning, upon presenting himself at Lord's and endeavoring to pass in without payment, he was informed that he was too young and too small to be a player, and it was only when James Iremonger and Hallam identified him and vouched for his statement being correct that he was allowed in.

Curiously enough exactly the same experience fell to his lot shortly afterwards at Derby.

These incidents for long provided a joke at the expense of the genial "Joe," and they had not been forgotten by the time he was representing England in Australia. In Melbourne one day our cricketers were approaching the ground in a body, when suddenly Charlie Blythe strolled on ahead and said to the janitor.

'WON'T LEAVE US!'

"You see that little fellow there?" indicating Hardstaff. "Well, he has been with us for the last couple of hours and he won't leave us"—which was perfectly true.

The gatekeeper naturally attached quite a wrong interpretation to the words, and the innocent Hardstaff, upon arriving at the entrance, found himself pulled up abruptly (to the joy of his comrades), and once more obliged to endeavor to prove his identity. Long may the little man live to tell the tale!

DO THINGS PROPERLY

Someday or other you'll want a Fox Skin. So why not do things properly, why not prepare for the day. Why not buy a Fox Skin that is different from the ordinary China Fox Skin. Let an expert who knows all about Fox Skins select one for you, a real beauty with nice long fur, and oh, what a bushy tail! Send a Chinese Post Office money order for $25 to Mr. Elly Widler, Ta Tsing Li, Szechwan Province, and he will at once mail you one of these specially selected Tibetan Fox Skins.

One Pastor Calls On Democrats For A Liberal Thank Offering For Harding

WOMEN LEARNING POLITICS

Bryan Has Republican Double And Burleson Is Known By His Umbrella

San Francisco, June 27.—Miss Elisabeth Marbury, one of New York's delegates at large, who has had many year's experience with theatricals, is disgusted with the conduct of Presidential booms here.

"They are about as dead as undertakers' shops," she said. "No theatrical man or movie producer could hold his job a week if he had no more originality or spontaneity than these boom handlers, with their badges and banners and glad hands. Why don't they get something new and startling?"

Democrats are chuckling at a remark made recently while the collection was being taken in the First Congregational Church. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. James L. Gordon, successor of the Rev. Dr. Aked, who left New York not so long ago for London, said as the plates were being passed:

"Now, I expect an extra large collection today. I expect it from the Democrats in my congregation who feel like making a thank offering for Harding's nomination by the Republicans."

San Francisco newspapers use some headline words which to Easterners are unfamiliar and hence queer. The word "Democrat" apparently is taboo, the party and its members invariably being referred to as "Bourbons." "Earthquake" is another word which seems to be a "Don't" in all the newspaper offices. They call the shocks "tremblers," and every one out here seems to know what it means. Another usage frequent here but unknown in the East is that of the word "sift" in place of the word "probe" so often misused in Eastern newspapers as meaning "investigation."

Delegates and others strolling down Market Street this afternoon thought some trolley car magnate had died when they reached a busy corner and found every trolley halted, apparently in a three-minute "respectful wait." Then they noticed a bell was ringing, and by-and-by a fire engine passed. It seems the bell starts ringing when the engines leave their quarters and all traffic halts at crossings the apparatus is to use until it has passed.

The Palmer people are superstitious—at least, they objected to a "To Let" sign which appeared over the quarters they occupy in the St. Francis Hotel. They regarded it as an evil omen and insisted that it be removed.

Many who have noticed that since he became a candidate the Attorney General is "Mitchell" Palmer instead of "A. Mitchell" Palmer, and are wondering why a political candidate always drops his first initial. President Wilson did so firmly that when an engraver prepared invitations to the first inauguration of "Thomas Woodrow Wilson" he had to do them all over again. Another who forget his first initial while he was a Presidential aspirant was T. Coleman du Pont, who dropped the "T," while he was flirting with the Republican nomination four years ago.

Some of William J. Bryan's closest political followers agree in their devotion to Bryan, and in nothing else. Two of them, born and raised in the same Nebraska town, were discussing suffrage, prohibition, the treaty plank and a host of other things a few days ago. Finally, one of them exclaimed: "Tom, is there anything on earth you and I agree on?"

"Yes, Tom," the other answered quickly, and without a twinkle. "We agree that Bill Bryan is the greatest man on earth."

Bryan has been the central figure in a series of mistaken and not mistaken identities. Half a dozen persons have rushed up to Republican Representative Julius Kahn of this State and extended him a warm welcome intended for the Commoner. One enthusiastic group of Bryan men followed Bryan's brother three blocks the other day before they discovered why he did not seem to recognise them.

Bryan was riding on a train in a recent Nebraska campaign trip when the conductor went into the car at Plattsmouth, spied him and said: "Sir, you look like the world's finest man, America's greatest patriot and the man the Democrats will nominate for President if they have any sense."

"Who is that?" asked Bryan.

"William Jennings Bryan," the conductor answered fervently. "He wasn't joshing either," says the man who tells the story.

A West Virginia man strolled into the John W. Davis headquarters, spied a flag-draped picture on the wall, and asked, complainingly: "Couldn't you find a better picture of the Ambassador than that?" He was pacified when it was explained that the picture was one of Woodrow Wilson, the only one at hand at the moment, and dating back apparently to his college presidential days.

Licensed Chinatown Guide No. 19 is always on the lookout for New Yorkers to pilot through the intricacies of the Chinese quarters. He likes them because he can boast to them that he, and he alone, guided Chuck Connors through the quarter when he once visited San Francisco. This particular guide has shown all sorts of famous persons about, but he regards his evening with Chuck as his greatest claim to fame.

Prohibition's name is not consistency. Much of the oratory in favor of the drys shows traces of alcoholic stimulation. A correspondent was talking in his room to a delegate from a Middle Western State which has been dry many years. He talked like this:

"Yes, sir; I am for prohibition to the last ditch. I think—excuse me just a minute (the delegate disappeared into the clothes closet, then came back). I was going to say I think if you will mix about one-third of this cherry brandy with two-thirds of this 20-year-old bonded rye you will have an excellent drink. Yes, Sir; for the sake of the young of this country I'm going to cast my vote for prohibition every time."

Women are trying hard to have themselves taken seriously in politics. They want to be interviewed just like the men on the serious issues of the day, though they don't always want to tell what they think. One of the prominent party women here said today:

"It makes me furious when these feature writers come and ask me if I powder my nose, or whether I think young girls should dance, or do I approve of low-cut gowns and all that rot. That sort of stuff doesn't go with public women nowadays. We've got beyond it."

The Democrats don't seem to have quite as much sentiment about their convention mementoes as the Republicans. Badges distributed by the Republicans were so arranged the medallions could be worn as watch fobs and with each one was a strap to facilitate its conversion. The Democrats just hand out badges—but they are better looking badges, at that.

Nothing has more astonished convention novices than all the "to-do" that was made over McAdoo's recent announcement that he did not want his name to go before the convention. One Westerner, with a frank open countenance, milled around among lobby groups for hours taking in the discussion, then he rubbed a puzzled brow as he said:

"Well, I have known about McAdoo for a long time and I've always thought he meant what he said. But I've learned something today. It seems this politics is a kind of game. You start with what a man says, then travel around through the back lot and across the pasture and up stream and down stream and around trying to figure what's the least likely thing for him to have meant—and that's the answer."

The first wets who witnessed the opening of the Cox headquarters in the Palace Hotel remarked: "Well, he is on the right road, all right. That way leads straight to the bar." Then they drifted along and discovered about the most potent thing offered in that bar was lemonade, and went away murmuring "Foiled again!"

A man's environment makes a lot of difference to some. Senator E. P. Harrison, Democrat, of Mississippi, was a visitor to the Republican National Convention at Chicago. He wandered around the lobbies looking forlorn and uncomfortable and altogether out of his element. Now one sees him in the lobbies here, serene and evidently feeling quiet at home and having a happy time.

"Do you know where I can see Post-master General Burleson?" asked a delegate at the Palace Hotel.

"Certainly," said Senator Glass. "He is down in the hotel lobby at this moment. I just left him. You cannot miss him."

Said the delegate:

"There are a thousand people down there and I have never seen Burleson in my life and don't know him."

"That's just what I said," said Senator Glass. "You cannot miss him, Burleson is the man with the umbrella."

The Postmaster General and his umbrella are inseparable companions. Rain or shine he carries it. At this season it is probable that he is the only person in San Francisco, possibly in all California, exercising such forethought to provide against a rainy day, for it never rains.

Crossing the broad plains of Nebrasaka on his way out to the coast Governor Smith of New York seemed to be greatly impressed by the magnificent distances observable from the car window.

"What are you thinking about, Al?" asked a member of the party.

"I was just thinkin'," replied the Governor, "that I'd hate to run for the Assembly out here. It would take nearly a whole year to do it."

"Women are queer," said Miss Elisabeth Marbury, delegate at large from New York, who is for a wet platform and doesn't care who knows it, in describing her experiences with members of that sex at the convention. "They have certainly kept me busy, since I reached San Francisco. Only today a thin, determined-looking woman called at my apartment and said she wished to learn from my own lips if I had been truly reported in the newspapers.

"'I have a pure and noble husband and three pure and noble sons,' she told me, 'and I resent your attitude to give the United States back to the saloon-keepers.'

"'Madame,' I replied, 'you say you have a pure and noble husband and three pure and noble sons. Don't you think you should be more generous to a woman who has neither husband nor sons?'"

Among the most remarkable posters on display in San Francisco is one which bears the picture of Attorney General Palmer holding an open book under which is the legend: "The fighting Quaker laying down the law." The portrait, although apparently reproduced by a photographic process, fails to do complete justice to Mr. Palmer. James J. Fagan, a Tammany Assembly District leader, regarded the poster disapprovingly. "The fighting Quaker," he murmured, "looks more to me like the quaking fighter."

Women of the New York delegation and their friends to the number of more than 100 were entertained by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt at afternoon tea on the battleship New York Sunday. Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the Governor, was present. Mrs. Anna Naughton of New York and Miss M. Louise Gress of White Plains poured the tea. There has been a decided increase in feminine zeal for the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt for United States Senator.

New York women received an unexpected education in the way of practical politics when a resolution assessing each delegate $25 for delegation expenses who passed at the New York caucus Sunday night, Smith, who presided, took no chances. He declared the motion carried without calling for the nces.

"There goes the price of a pair of shoes," was the comment of one of New York's twelve women delegates, who added that she had never known that politics was like that.

Oscar H. Waters, Chairman of the National Negro Democratic Committee, is acting in a more humble capacity than his title would indicate. He is the doortender at the headquarters of Charles F. Murphy. Today he entered Murphy's suite bearing a watermelon and two bottles of what in pre-prohibition days might have been suspected of being whisky.

"I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of the Lord than dwell in the tents of the wicked," he quoted, as he held up the two bottles.

"Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, for he has done marvellous things," was his apostrophe to the watermelon.

With these preliminaries Waters proceeded to cut a hole in the watermelon and poured into it the contents of one of the bottles. He then disappeared with his treasure into an inner room.

P. A. Holt of Jacksonville, Fla., an Edwards booster, was encouraged yesterday by the ascendancy of Governor Edwards as the only real wet candidate. He said Edwards was the only Democrat who could win.

As proof of the popularity of the wet issue he cited the experience of Tom Cason, a shipyard worker, who ran for Constable in Duval County, Florida, and asked a better educated friend to prepare a campaign card for him. The latter, Mr. Holt said, wrote out the usual notice of candidacy, ending with:

"Mr. Thomas Cason respectfully requests his fellow Democrats to support him for the nomination for Constable."

"Tom scratched his chin thoughtfully," Mr. Holt continued, "and decided this would not do." He then wrote on the copy: 'Like Edwards of New Jersey, I am.'

"The point of this story," observed Mr. Holt, "is that Tom won the nomination and then, of course, the election."

A hundred men in bright green uniforms, headed by a band dressed in suits of the same color, marched up Geary Street today and stopped in front of the Bellevue Hotel, where the Tammany contingent stays. Thinking that they were being serenaded by a division of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Tammanyites set up a cheer, which died quickly to a whisper when each of the uniformed men produced a small English flag.

One of the Tammany men stopped long enough on the sidewalk to learn that the men in the green suits were members of Arab Patrol of Rameses Temple of the Order of the Mystic Shrine of Toronto, Canada, taking a side trip to San Francisco before returning home from the Shrine convention at Portland, Ore. The Captain of the patrol explained that the green was the sacred color of the Arabs as well as being the national tint of the Irish.

"It's a great hall," said the policeman on guard in the lobby behind the speakers' stand of the auditorium. "Holds a lot of people. I see the Democratic Convention can't fill it. There's lots of empty seats, but it fills up for a good fight. Meehan and Fulton filled it twice, and Benny Leonard drew a capacity crowd.

"John McCormack was turning them away too; and when they had the policemen's ball here it wouldn't hold half of them as wanted to get in. Takes the Irish to fill it, you see. Guess there's not as many Irish in a Democratic Convention as there used to be.

"Yes, we've got fire laws here, but we don't enforce them except when there's some occasion to. Nobody is smoking out there on the floor. Of course, but if a man wants a smoke—or a girl, either—they shouldn't have to go out on the street. Maybe they might need to stay around the auditorium. So they can smoke in the corridors of they want to.

"See that girl in there under the speakers' stand puffing a cigarette. She's an usher, on duty till it's over. If she feels the need of a few puffs why should anybody stop her? Some of these girl reporters, too. I hear that they asked people not to smoke cigars right behind the stairway to the platform because the smoke tantalized everybody as had to set up there all through it and would like to get away for a little relaxation.

"Yet, it's a liberal town, this. We've got as many laws as anybody, I guess, but we don't take them so much to heart."

COLUMBUS HEADQUARTERS

Duties As Governor Force Him To Conduct Campaign From Ohio Capital

Dayton, Ohio, July 7.—If the Legislature of Louisiana acts in accord with the opinion of Governor James M. Cox women will be enfranchised to vote at the November election.

Thus the Democratic party may get the credit for making universal suffrage a fact.

In a telegram to Frank J. Looney, chairman of the Louisiana State Central Committee, Governor Cox expressed it as his opinion that the Louisiana Legislature owes it as a duty to the Democratic Party to ratify at once.

As Governor of Ohio, he has repeatedly placed himself on record in favor of the vote to women.

SIGNED SUFFRAGE BILLS

—He has signed a number of bills intended to enfranchise women in this State, and in a special message to the Legislature transmitting the Federal amendment for ratification, he urged favorable action.

It was stated today by those in close touch with the Democratic Presidential candidate that he contemplated conducting his campaign chiefly from Columbus, where he will necessarily have to be much of the time in connection with his duties as Governor.

His Dayton friends, however, anticipate that no small part of his campaign work will be conducted from his newspaper office. It has been the practice of the Governor to come home each Friday from Columbus and spend the week-end with his family at "Trail's End" and at his newspaper office.

BEATEN RIVALS WIRE HIM

No political conferences of importance are expected until the party leaders return from San Francisco. The visit of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Vice-Presidential nominee, which is expected Saturday, is not anticipated to develop into anything more than an exchange of felicitations.

The Governor spent most of today at his newspaper office receiving callers and reading messages of congratulation. Among them were felicitations from all the candidates who were contenders for the honor that came to the Ohio Governor, Vice-President and Mrs. Marshall, Cabinet members, governors, political leaders of both parties, representatives of labor, business men and personal friends.

One message from Franklin K Lane, former Secretary of the Interior, said:

"I sincerely congratulate you and the country. Do give us a campaign that is constructive that will challenge the interest and support of the new voters. The people want to hear a definite word as to home affairs as well as foreign."

URGES MORE HOMES

Tonight the Governor talked golf with the contestants in the Ohio golf tournament at a dinner at the Layton Country Club. He said:

"There is an erroneous impression that golf is a rich man's game. It is not. A set of clubs don't cost much."

He declared it encouraged outdoor life and particularly country living.

"If I have no public hobby that is more outstanding than any other, it has been the preachment of 'more homes.' You can preach patriotism to a man and appeal to his sense of duty, but you can't make the sort of appeal to him that he gains from his own reflections after he owns a home.

"He buys a lot, and quite often borrows money to build a home. His hopes are centered in the enterprise, and he works for it and it becomes his own particular interest in his general allotment of 'God's footstool.'

"When he finally achieves his objective and owns his home, he realises it is his, and that he is protected in his ownership by his Government; that under the laws he is given the right to transfer what he has earned to the next generation, and realises that this generation, too, will be protected.

"He gets a real object lesson of the relation that exists between the Government and the individual."

MOTOR TRUCKS

is a virtue in a motor truck, more than in any other form of mechanical transportation. The degree of year-in and year-out efficiency in a motor truck is measured by its owner in dollars and cents. Before a wise buyer, therefore, listens to the salesman he is going to satisfy himself from a reliable source of the truck's previous performances. The best evidence on this point is the number of old users who are again placing their faith in any particular make of truck.

The Garford Truck will meet your every requirement with efficiency and economy, and will add another name to its list of friends.

CANDIDATES TALK FOR PHONOGRAPH

Harding And Coolidge Speak For Records For Campaign Distribution

FORMER REFERS TO TREATY

Latter Lauds Lincoln—Presidential Candidate's Staff Start For Marion

Washington, June 29.—Senator Harding and Governor Coolidge made their first campaign speeches today. Both spoke into the recording instrument of a talking machine and the records will be used during the campaign.

Senator Harding spoke on "Americanism" and Governor Coolidge on "Law and Order." The Presidential nominee recorded his speech at his office in Washington while Governor Coolidge spoke into the machine in Northampton. The Governor left Boston today for Washington and will confer here with Senator Harding tomorrow.

It is believed that Senator Harding may try to spend a quiet day by himself before he goes to Marion, probably at some friend's home in the country. A special car carrying his personal staff and newspaper correspondents will leave Washington Saturday afternoon, July 3, at 4:10 p.m., but it was not announced that the Senator himself would depart that day. It would not be absolutely necessary for him to reach Marion until Monday, July 5. That day has been set aside by the people of Marion as "Home Coming Day."

The speech which Senator Harding made today for the talking machine follows:

"My countrymen, the flaming torch of Americanism was lighted in framing the Federal Constitution in 1787. The Pilgrims signed their simple and majestic covenant a full century and a half before and set aflame their beacon of liberty on the coast of Massachusetts. Other pioneers of new world freedom were rearing their new standard of liberty in Jamestown and Plymouth for five generations before Lexington and Concord heralded a new era. It was all American in the destined result, yet all of it lacked the soul of nationality. In simple truth, there was no thought of nationality in the revolution for American independence. The colonists were resisting a wrong and freedom was their solace. Once it was achieved, nationality was the only agency to this preservation.

DEPRECATES TREATY TERMS

"Americanism really began when robed in nationality. The American Republic began to blaze the trail of representative popular government. Representative democracy was proclaimed the safe agency of highest human freedom. America headed the forward procession of civil, human and religious liberty which ultimately will affect the liberation of all mankind. The Federal Constitution is the very base of all Americanism, the ark of the covenant of American liberty, the very temple of equal rights. The Constitution does abide and ever will so long as the Republic survives.

"Let us hesitate before we surrender the nationality which is the very soul of highest Americanism. This Republic has never failed humanity nor endangered civilization.

"We have been tardy sometimes, like when we were proclaiming democracy and neutrality while we ignored our national rights, but the ultimate and helpful part we played in the great war will be the pride of America so long as the world recites the story.

"We do not mean to hold aloof, we choose no isolation, we shun no duty. I like to rejoice in an American conscience and in a big conception of our obligations to liberty, justice and civilization. I like to think of Columbia's helping hand to new republics which are seeking the blessings portrayed in our example, but I have a confidence in our America that requires no council of foreign powers to point the way of American duty. We wish to counsel, co-operate and contribute, but we arrogate to ourselves the keeping of the American continent and every concept of our moral obligations. It is fine to idealize but it is very practical to make sure our own house is in perfect order before we attempt a miracle of world stabilisation.

"Call it the selfishness of nationality if you will. I think it an inspiration to patriotic devotion—

"To safeguard America first.

"To stabilise America first.

"To prosper America first.

"To think of America first.

"To exalt America first.

"To live for and revere America first."

"Let the Internationalist dream and the Bolshevist destroy. God pity him "for whom no minstrel rapture dwell." In the spirit of the Republic we proclaim Americanism and acclaim America."

Governor Coolidge's address was as follows:

"The first duty of a Government is to be true to itself. This doesn't mean perfection. It means loyalty to ideals. The ideals of America were set out in the Declaration of Independence and adopted in the Constitution. They did not represent perfection attained but perfection planned. The fundamental principle was freedom. The fathers knew this was not yet apprehended. They formed a Government firm in the faith that it was ever to press toward this high mark.

"In selfishness, in greed, in lust for gain, it turned aside. Enslaving others, it became itself enslaved. Bondage in one part consumed freedom in all parts. The Government of the fathers ceasing to be true to itself was perishing.

"Five score and ten years ago that Divine Providence, which infinite repetition has made only the more a miracle, sent into the world a new life destined to save a nation. No star, no sign, foretold his coming. About his cradle all was poor and mean, save only the great source of all men, the love of a wonderful woman. When she faded away in his tender years, from her death bed in humble poverty, she dowered her son with greatness. There can be no proper observance of a birthday which forgets the mother. Into his origin, as into his life, men long have looked and wondered. In wisdom great, but in humility greater; in justice strong but in compassion stronger, he became a leader of men by being a follower of the truth. He overcame evil with good. His presence filled the nation. He broke the might of oppression. He restored a race to its birthright. His mortal frame has vanished but his spirit increases with the increasing years, the richest legacy of the greatest century.

"Men show by what they worship what they are. It is no accident that before the great example of American manhood our people stand with respect and reverence. In Abraham Lincoln is revealed our ideal, the hope of our country fulfilled.

"He was the incarnation of what America was to be. Through him the Almighty bestowed upon the nation a new birth of freedom, that this dear land of ours might be returned to the house of its fathers. We are the beneficiaries of a life of surpassing service wise in freedom and gentle in gentleness.

"Freedom has many sides and angles. Human slavery has been swept away. With security of personal rights has some security of property rights. The freedom of the human mind is recognised in the right of free speech and free press. The public schools have made education possible for all and ignorance is a disgrace. In political affairs the vote of the humblest has long counted for as much as the vote of the most exalted.

"We are working toward the day when in our industrial life equal honor shall fall to equal endeavor. Duty is collective as well as personal. Law must rest on the permanent foundation of righteousness. Industry, thrift, character are not conferred by act or a resolve. Government cannot relieve from toil. Do the day's work. If it be to protect the rights of the weak, whoever objects, do it. If it be to help a powerful corporation better to serve the people, whatever the opposition, do that. Expect to be called a standpatter, but don't be a standpatter. Expect to be called a demagogue, but don't be a demagogue.

"We need a broader, firmer, deeper faith in people—a faith that men desire to do right, that the Government is founded upon a righteousness that will endure."

Those of Senator Harding's personal staff leaving Washington Saturday afternoon will include George B. Christian, Jr., his secretary; Captain Ferd Parker, Superintendent of the Stationery Division of the Senate; Howard Mannington, assistant to the secretary; Charles Hard, corresponding secretary; Elisha Hanson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Bruce Lamond and Miss Cornelia Mattern, who have for seven years been private stenographers for Senator Harding; Mrs. L. M. Blair, confidential clerk, and the following members of the secretarial staff: Miss Catherine Lawlor, Miss Hattie E. Harris and Miss Eva Uhle, and Robert B. Armstrong, Director of Publicity. About ten newspaper correspondents expect to go from Washington and will be stationed at Marion throughout the campaign. In addition, newspaper men from various points in Ohio will be assigned to Marion headquarters.

Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, who starts for his home and a trip through the Far West at an early date, saw Senator Harding today. Senator McNary, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands, discussed briefly with Senator Harding the reclamation problems of the West. After his conference with Senator Harding, Senator McNary said:

"I am gratified and delighted that Senator Harding has such a thorough and comprehensive view of the problems of the West. I find him sympathetic to the underlying principles of reclamation and the increasing productivity of the great areas of the Western States. Senator Harding has also sound and progressive views on good roads and all of the other agencies for the development and prosperity of rural communities everywhere, but particularly apropos to the West."

Among Senator Harding's visitors today was Stanley T. Howe of New York, Director of the National Budget Committee and Secretary of the Young Republican Club. Mr. Howe informed the Senator that the Budget Committee is making an extensive study of the various Federal departments to prepare a bill to be ready for presentation at the next session of Congress, providing for a reorganization of governmental bureaus.

"You have a considerable job on your hands," Senator Harding told Mr. Howe. "Economy, as you know, is a part of my program."

The bill under contemplation is intended to replace the Budget bill which President Wilson vetoed, although approving its principles.

Daughter And Granddaughter Of William G. M'Adoo

Political Notes From The Local Chinese Papers

At midnight on Saturday, the Peking police sealed the homes of 79 Anfu Parliamentarians. No arrests were made. The Kuo Shih Pao, the Ming Shih Pao, two Anfu organs and the Kung Kee Printing Shop, owned by Little Hsu were also sealed.

Wang Shih-tseng, an Anfu Parliamentarian, was arrested by the police on Monday.

Both Generals Chang Tso-lin and Tsao Kun have endorsed Premier Chin's plans of disbanding the troops.

The 28th Fengtien division is being withdrawn to Mukden.

For reorganisation of his forces, General Tsao Kun is floating a loan of $5,000,000 redeemable in six years. He will issue bonds to be known as Chihli Internal Loan Bonds at various denominations. Interest will be four percent.

Ma Liang, the Mohamedan Military Commissioner of Tsinan, Shantung, who met with defeat in the Chihli-Anfu clash, is now intriguing with his religious confreres for a rebellion against the Chihli militarists.

A further charge of manslaughter has been made against Little Hsu by General Feng Yu-hsiang, the Christian Commander at Changteh, Hunan. Hsu, it will be remembered, invited General Lu Chien-chang, Military Governor of Shensi to his Tientsin home and had him summarily shot in his garden on account of certain personal grievances.

Mr. Lu Cheng-hsiang and Dr. C. T. Wang will be appointed China's delegates to the League of Nations.

General Wu Pei-fu, the victorious Chihli general, is now in Loyang, Honan, and has invited Generals Feng Yu-hsiang and Li Kwei-yuen to attend a military conference with him.

London Fox Trots As Maurice Leads

London, June 26.—Maurice, who used to dance at the Biltmore and now dances at the Piccadilly, considers that he has won by a knockout in the battle he has just fought with the associations of English and French dancing teachers over the relative merits of the one-step and the fox trot as compared with the schottische and the other forms of mid-Victorian revelry which some of the dancing teachers here still pretend to champion.

"People want to dance over here," said Maurice today. "They're wilder to dance here than they were in America five years ago. And the way to get them to dance is not to put up to them the complicated six and seven and eight steps of the polka and the schottische, but the one or two simple steps of the one-step, the fox trot and the waltz."

And, incidentally, it would seem that if the dancing teachers are determined to exclude the one-step and the fox trot from their curricula they will exclude the pupils too, for from the Piccadilly ballroom to the "Palais de Danse" at Hammersmith, all London, from East End to Putney, is one-stepping, and the gentleman of color who can wag a wicked drumstick or slide a snasty trombone is as sure of a job in London as he would be of persimmons in October in Virginia.

Doughboys' Cloth Lines Paris Taxis

Paris, June 26.—Although it was a common sight to see youngsters in all parts of France clothed with cut-down olive-drab uniforms discarded by American doughboys before leaving France, the query of what has become of the thousands of yards of cloth left in the American army stores has been answered. Instead of being upholstered with the usual dark blue or grey cloth, Paris taxicabs are appearing remodeled as American hacks.

Investigation shows that the enterprising owners discovered that the cloth destined to withstand barbwire attacks and the dust of battle could be purchased from the American liquidation board cheaper than the ordinary shoddy material offered by profiteering manufacturers. Four thousand Paris taxis already are wearing American khaki dress inside, and it is asserted the boulevard "filiettes" lonely for the American soldiers who made life pleasant during the war cannot be induced to patronise any thing but "doughboy taxis."

SHANGHAI, AUGUST 11, 1920

WEATHER

The typhoon tends to recurve to northnorth-east, to threaten Kiusiu and the South of Nippon. Very variable breezes along our coasts. Fine and hot weather.

The New Tragedy Of Europe

THE fate of European civilisation again is in the balance. According to The London Times, the situation created by the unprovoked Polish attack on Russia is only less tragic than that which existed on August 1, 1914. The victorious Bolshevists, led by Brusiloff, have broken the Polish resistance and apparently are about to capture Warsaw and proclaim a new government, the Soviet Republic of Poland. This is serious enough news to the Allies but it is by no means the most serious news of the day.

Labor demonstrations are being held throughout England protesting against Allied help for Poland and the Women's Co-operative Guild of England, 44,000 strong, has issued a manifesto declaring "We are not prepared to see our men sacrificed any longer to the ambitions and jealousies of governments."

The Danish workers are refusing to move supplies intended for the Polish army.

The German Government announces its readiness to resume diplomatic and economic relations with the Bolshevik Government and the Bolshevists, in reply to the Allies, demand the right of free intercourse with Germany across Poland.

According to The Times, further, the German Government is determined to prevent by every means in its power the Entente's sending troops through Germany to help Poland.

And the Bolshevik Government rejects the Allied demand for a conference on the Polish situation and says that it will make a separate peace with Poland.

The rapidly growing friendship between the Germans and the Russians is the most dangerous element in a most inflammable situation and its potentialities for harm are further increased by the discovery that the German Government itself used millions of marks to foment the trouble in the Sarre basin at the very time it was pretending to the Allies that it was trying to suppress that outbreak.

Recently it had been believed that the German Government was trying to be honest with the Allies, and that the rapprochement with the Bolshevists was being manipulated by the Spartacides and Militarists, who were trying to upset the Ebert Government. It may be that the temptation once more to plunge Europe into war by joining hands with the Bolshevists in the hope of smashing the Peace Treaty, was too strong for the Germans to resist.

The main, indeed the only, hope of a general peace, would seem to arise from the fact that all Europe is weary of war. On the other hand no nation in Europe is satisfied with the terms of the Treaty of Peace, Germany, of course, least of all. The temptation to Germany to take another chance must be great, but against this is the decided opinion of the German people, as they proved in the last election, that they don't want Bolshevism, and if they go in for more war now, it can only be as Allies of the Bolshevists. If they succumb to the undoubtedly powerful lure in this direction, it will mean another European debacle, followed, if they and the Bolshevists are successful, by a complete new deal in Europe.

The Allies have now appealed to America for aid for Poland. We are bound to say that we do not see much hope in that direction. The Polish boundaries were fixed in the Peace Treaty and the Allies not only organised, trained and equipped the Polish army but they permitted it to violate the terms of the Peace Treaty and invade Russia.

Britain's $6,000,000,000 Budget

BY SIR GEORGE PAISH
(Well Known British Economist)

A British budget which provides for an expenditure of nearly $6,000,000,000 with the prospect of indefinite continuance, is likely to contribute powerfully to the financial and economic disaster which is now threatening Europe, including Great Britain, and which, unless steps are taken to avert it without further delay, will imperil the welfare of all the nations.

Great Britain has a duty to the world which no other nation possesses, for it has been mainly, indeed almost entirely, responsible for the growth of the credit system and the close dependence of nations upon each other for the prime necessaries of life. Now that the whole credit system is falling to pieces, not only does the British Chancellor of the Exchequer do nothing to strengthen it, but he is actually contributing to its collapse by tacitly assenting to a permanent expenditure beyond England's capacity to meet.

CRIPPLES HELPING POWER

In introducing a budget which provides for so great an expenditure in a year of peace, he is crippling the power of Great Britain to render effective help to the nations in their need.

In future, approximately 30 percent of the income of the British people will be required to provide for their Government's expenditure, against a pre-war porportion of a little over 8 percent.

The continual absorption of labor and of income by these vast expenditures cannot fail most seriously to handicap and diminish the power of Great Britain to pay for the food and material which she and the other nations of Europe need to buy from abroad in order to maintain life and to restore their productive power.

The fact that the League of Nations has already issued invitations for a world financial conference, and in its invitation has definitely stated that "the world is at this moment in a condition of financial and economic disorder, with results that are at present so serious and may in future become so dangerous that the League of Nations cannot ignore them without failing in its most essential duties," has done more to raise hopes of the difficulties being overcome than any action that has yet been taken or any statement that has yet been made.

Indeed, no small part of the recovery in British exchange in recent weeks and of the relative steadiness of the franc and of the lira has come from the knowledge that the League of Nations, with the approval of the various Powers, was to call a world financial conference at which the world crisis would be fully discussed and the facts of the situation frankly faced.

One of the main reasons for the very small productions of Europe is the immense Government expenditures, not only of England, but of France, Italy, Germany and, indeed, of practically all the great nations—expenditures not for production, but for consumption, which indeed diminish production and increase consumption.

HUGE GOVERNMENT EXPENSE

The world's aggregate Government expenditures at the present time are in thousands of millions of pounds, whereas previously they were in hundreds of millions.

In the current crop season most of the Continental nations are suffering seriously from famine, as their own productions are small and they have not the means of buying from other nations. With the present outlook for the world's crops, the continued extravagance of Governments and of peoples upon non-essentials and with still greater shortage of international credit in prospect, their sufferings will greatly increase, and consequently the forces making for far-reaching changes in the organisation of society are likely to be more powerful than most people desire to contemplate.

Meantime, the new British taxes fall upon almost every one, directly or indirectly, and the effect of the budget must be a further appreciable percentage advance in the cost of living.

"HOME WANTED"

I'm just a little homeless dog; I guess I started wrong;
My legs are much too short they say, and then, my tail's too long.

I haven't any place to go, and people on the street
Say, "Howdy, Pup," and pat my head—but that ain't good to eat.

The other day I bit a boy—I didn't bite him bad,—
Because he hit me with a rock, and people called me mad,
And such a chase you never saw, until I dodged and hid—
They every last one blamed me for that little thing I did.

I wish I was adopted, for the weather's getting cold,
Don't anybody want a dog that's just as good as gold?

POLAND

How long, O, God, shall men be ridden down,
And trampled under by the last and least
Of men? The heart of Poland hath not ceased
To quiver, though her sacred blood doth drown
The fields, and out of every smouldering town
Cries to thee, lest brute power be increased
Till that o'ergrown Barbarian in the East
Trangress his ample bound to some new crown;
Cries to Thee, "Lord how long shall these things be?
How long this icy-hearted Muscovite
Oppress the region?" Us, O. Just and Good,
Forgive, who smiled when she was torn in three;
Us, who stand now, when we should aid the right
A matter to be wept with tears of blood:

Correspondence

A NOTABLE ANNIVERARY THIS WEEK

Editor, The China Press.

Dear Sir: When a Friday falls on the thirteenth day of the month it is superstitiously believed to be a day of bad omen, but this year that marks the 22nd anniversary of the beginning of America's greatest achievement in the Far East, for on that day in 1898 the City of Manila capitulated. It was, generally speaking, America's debut day in the Oriental theater. On account of that achievement, which was not sought but forced upon her, it was obviously necessary for America to make, and she did make, her influence felt in the Orient, so that today she occupies a position of envy among other older nations which had been in this field for many decades. What America has accomplished and is accomplishing in the Orient is graphically recorded in the world's history, but what she has particularly accomplished out of a purely humanitarian and altruistic impulse in the Philippine Islands, is of special interest, and is made the subject of this correspondence. Lifting a people from practical darkness to western civilisation, bringing them up and placing them in a position of prominence among Oriental sister nations in the short period of twenty-two years is certainly an achievement unrivalled in the world's history, and one to be proud of. What Spaniards could not accomplish by subjugation and harshness in three centuries, Americans did by persuasion and example in less than twenty-five years. Of course, the task could not have been accomplished if the wards had not responded to the teaching, but the Filipinos did respond! They grasped their opportunity and the results we have before us today.

Incredulous as it may seem, the Filipinos did not waste a minute in setting themselves to learn what the Americans had come to teach them, and as a result, in these two and twenty years they have learned sufficiently to entitle them to a government of their own, at which goal they now aim. Despite biased opinions, I affirm that the Filipinos are now, today, fit for self government. Unbiased people and disinterested friends of the Filipinos, who are familiar with their conditions not superficially, but from a practical point of view, will surely indorse this assertion.

Unfortunately, however, the Philippines have been made a bone of political contention in the United States for the past two or three campaigns, and to this may be ascribed the failure to achieve their long-struggled-for aspiration. A democratic victory at the polls next November will mean a Filipinos victory and the reverse a Filipino defeat.

Yet against the opinion of Senator Sterling, as expressed in a recent interview which he gave to the local press, I am optimistic enough to believe that the Filipinos will be given their independence long before the lapse of another decade. The fittest will always survive, and so will the Americans, as a nation, live up to their principle that every people have the right to govern themselves.

Undoubtedly there are quite a number of Americans now living in China who on August 13, 1898, participated in that eventful American achievement and to them is due the same manifestation of gratitute as yearly on that day is shown to the veterans of the Spanish-American war settled in the Philippines. Glory be to those who fight for the weak.

Yours truly,
J. V. P.

WOULD LIKE TO HEAR FROM FOREIGN WIVES

Editor, The China Press

Dear Sir: You are indeed very kind to sacrifice so much of your valuable space for the sake of bringing to light a question that is so very important to the people of China.

Regarding the letters appearing in the paper during the past week. I have heard many criticisms. One lady says that it is the fault of the husband, another says it is due to the inefficiency of the husband financially and so forth. But they are largely talking from one side of the question and with prejudice.

These letters are not only interesting but they are stimulative as well. "A Young Husband" puts before us an excellent contrast between the Chinese and foreign families. I think he was not painting something angelic of the foreign family and I hope he was not illustrating the character of his own spouse, as "T.A.S." states.

His idea is, I think, to set up an example of a model home which we can follow. Of course there are exceptions. Not everybody will admit that all foreign families are such as "A Young Husband" described, but had "T.A.S." in his travelling visited some decent foreign homes he might even have learned that they really are angelic.

One has to cherish some ideals in order to succeed. If the Western inventors had never set their imaginations free, the wonders of the universe would not have been revealed to us. It is no wonder, however, that an educated man like "T.A.S." should say that foreign education is not necessary to our modern sisters, for it has been our practice to stick to what we know without investigating it or attempting to improve it. This is why we are so far behind the Western countries. I do earnestly hope that our brothers and sisters are wise enough to give their own judgment to this matter.

In my opinion, I strongly advocate the idea of choosing the good points from western practices and apply them properly to our Chinese homes. In order to make a home Home as so many of the letters indicated, it is not enough to have only one party working. I believe in co-operation between the husband and the wife. If the attempt fails in any way, the blame is certainly not on one party alone, but on both.

Some of our educated brothers may have been unfortunate enough to marry ignorant girls or "half baked" ones; they must not be disappointed, nor should they nourish any dislike toward the girls. For, psychologically speaking, it is very hard for one to succeed if he is disappointed, and when he dislikes something at the beginning he is likely to find fault with it whether it be right or wrong. In such case an outsider can easily see that it is emotion at play. So it is with the other sex as well.

Besides this there are many other causes that account for trouble in the family. In the older generation, the husband was nothing short of an absolute master to the wife. We denounce this practice, of course. Foreign influence has done marvelously well to eliminate this evil from the practices of modern husbands. Instead of looking down upon his wife, a young husband now respects her. In the west this practice is appreciated by the fair sex as something worthy on the part of the men. But I dare say some Chinese wives have misinterpreted the idea. They take it as a sign of submission and to have the husband submissive is certainly considered by them as the proudest thing. In due course the habit is formed which oftentimes results in a great deal of trouble.

Nowadays when everybody is talking about "quality" and "freedom," I have heard many women say, "I am not to be controlled by any body," this when their husbands attempt to advise. I do not, however, consider our modern sisters so ignorant as not to be able to distinguish a husband's advice from a command. Far from it. But I think it is because they think their "equality" or "freedom" is being meddled with that they can not help being blinded a little bit.

So far the blame seems to be on the female side. But, my dear readers, there is just as much blame on the side of the men. We find everywhere men whose habit it is to seek evil. They were not driven from home by bad housekeeping; it is simply a habit. A Maggie is necessary to bring them up. Their habits would not allow them to appreciate sweet home life and by adopting a little of this policy, it might be hoped to bring them round.

I have known of an actual case like this, where the wife turned Maggie to her husband who was nothing short of Mr. Jiggs. When the husband at last came round, to show signs of a good man, she accordingly dropped that policy and played the part of a good wife.

There are men who, being educated in a foreign manner, still follow such practices as "flowery feasts" and "sparrow playing." It is not because good foreign influence cannot get hold of them but because they are forced to do so in social intercourse. In such case, a wife can do no better than to give a little warning in a motherly way so that the husband would not fall into worse practices. She can never do it by grumbling all the time or being too authoritative. Here is where the duties of the wife come. If she fails to make man comfortable why he will just turn a deaf ear to her. It does not take long on the other hand to enfold a man to the charm of Home.

Once successful in their homes, our educated sisters can easily influence ignorant friends. This from one family to the other, and so to the whole country, this properly applied foreign influence mixed with what we have chosen from our own customs will certainly help to uplift the homes of China.

I hope some of our foreign sisters will hint at what we have not discussed so far and some of our Chinese wives will discuss the problem even if it is to describe their own family. Thus we can have more opinions in regard to this important matter.

Thanking you very much for your space. Yours truly,

JUST AN OBSERVER.

Britain Warned Of Tax Revolt

BY LORD LEVERHULME
(Known as England's greatest merchant prince; the world's biggest soap maker)

As the result of the system of taxing industry now being rigorously enforced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Austen Chamberlain, England is confronted with a greater danger than that arising from her war-indebtedness; it is the danger of an inevitable revolution, which will come to the British Isles swift as a lightning flash when multitudinous unemployment stalks through the crowded streets of our manufacturing cities.

This is the spectre I should like to see haunting the Treasury; not the spectre of a debt which is nothing to the resources of the British Empire.

Our population is constantly growing, and five years hence, when employment must be found for 2,000,000 more people, it will be seen by every theorist in the land that Mr. Chamberlain killed their prospects of employment as effectually as if he had taken hammer and nails and fastened up the doors of our factories.

After all what is this incubus of national debt which so intimidates Mr. Chamberlain? We will call it $32,500,000,000. Is it so very terrible a sum? At the end of the Napoleonic wars our debt was $4,000,000,000. But our empire today is not merely ten times as rich, nor is it merely a hundred times as rich; literally, thanks to modern science, it is a thousand times as rich. Why, then, this panic haste to repay?

AMERICA'S SWIFT RECOVERY

Then take America. At the end of the Civil War the debt of the United States was $2,500,000,000. The first step of peace was not to repay this debt, but to restore the economic future of the people; a step which cost $1,500,000,000. The debt then became $4,000,000,000. What followed was the most rapid recovery and extinction of debt that the world has ever known.

With the resources of our vast empire and with ample capital at the disposal of enterprising trade and commerce, we can produce wealth available for the Chancellor of the Exchequer in income tax and super-tax to repay, when once we are fairly started, a national debt very much greater than that with which we are burdened today.

Without capital, the British Empire consists of unhewn forests, undug minerals, unploughed prairies, and rivers running to waste. Aided by capital, strengthened by confidence and practising the thrift of our fathers, the British race can win all this enormous wealth for the advantage of the whole community. We can improve the level of general comfort and gradually extinguish our debt.

With the destinies of her people in the hands of a wise statesmanship, I can forsee the dawn of such a prosperity for the British Empire as was never dreamed of by its founders. But ruin awaits us all when the commanding aim of our high finance ceases to be the durable enlargement of our productive power.

It is the surplus profits of her business that have made England the predominant figure in the commerce of the whole world. Without those profits, all the courage of her industrialists, all the wisdom of her statesmen, all the advantages of her geographical situation would have been in vain.

WHAT LOGIC ARGUES

When my income was $250,000 a year I lived in a house that cost me $175. Every penny I could spare went into my business. By the re-employment of my surplus capital my business was expanded. That is the way all business expands. And if the State takes that surplus in taxation there can be no expansion.

Deflation, too, is a will-o'-the-wisp. People cry out, deflate capital, deflate prices; let us get back to the pre-war standards.

But why? If we can deflate capital and prices, why stop at what may be called the Victorian age? Why not go back to the Plantagenets. An artisan now earns $5 a day in Great Britain. In Victorian times he earned $2. But in Plantagenet times this fine fellow, who built out monasteries, our churches and our castles earned only 12 cents a day. Now, if $5 a day is bad and $2 a day is good, manifestly 12 cents a day is better still.

HIGH WAGES TO REMAIN

In my opinion, wages will not come down. That being so, we must have only one concernment to multiply our products. More ships, more factories, more towns, better machinery, better organisation and better government. If the individual is to find life easier and happier, production must increase. We ought to care very little whether wages are $5 or $10 a day, and care a great deal whether our systems of organisation and production are the absolute best that science and experience can accomplish. We must expand or perish.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

What Is The Superman

BY DR. WM. A. McKREVER
(Professor in the University of Kansas and a Noted Educator)

Too many parents expect their children to manifest some kind of rare genius, or that some bright talent will pop out to place their child in a superior advantage over others.

Ninety-nine percent of such parents are doomed to disappointment. Ordinarily the thing simply cannot happen. It is by far more probable that your "very bright" boy is, in fact, very ordinary human stuff.

But I ask you to regard it as a credit both to himself and to you that he is ordinary human, for such a creature contains almost endless possibilities of growth and attainment.

In attempting to see peculiar inherent genius in your child you are probably guilty of the same false quest as our late enemies who imagined there was existent among themselves a peculiar type, a superman. But the superman was shot full of holes and along with him was annihilated—we hope—the false ideal of supermanism.

But there are indeed many super qualities in your child—as is the case with all the common ones. Your peculiar task is to bring to realisation these latent aptitudes by long, patient training. That is your surest hope of finding the hidden genius. Dig for it by having your boy dig also and finally genius will come out of the mine.

I take the liberty of quoting from my latest volume, "Man and The New Democracy." It will help all to understand my point of view.

"Now, it may be said that we have found a substitute for the superman as a standard of guidance for society, and that we are highly satisfied with him. Already his sturdy form entices us. But he is none other than the every day human being, inherently possessing the so-called normal faculties and following daily that plain and worthy course of life for which his heart instinctively yearns.

"Kings must bow to him, all the elect of the earth must do him reverence, and all who would be completely saved must touch the hem of his garment. He is the superb better self within us all. He is not confined to place or rank or sex. Sometimes in the field or factory or the Senate or the Presidency, we may find him; sometimes in the kitchen, or sweatshop, or nursery, or drawing-room, we may find her.

"As we travel abroad throughout the country we may meet this person in various places and disguises, but always and ever the same cheerful, hard-working, exuberant soul—one in whom life and love and labor are daily combined in one superb effort."

Pictures In Summer

By Angela Morgan

The long dining room is shuttered against the brassy tattoo of the sun;
Its smooth white tables are oases in the parched and swollen daytime;
Its screened doors, newly painted,
Speak denial to the bees and June bugs and whimpering mosquitos.
Its cool curtains and decorous china offer contentment,
And guests are glad of crisply moving waitresses
Aproned in immaculate white.
Over in the bay window, debutante from New York, flanked by her family,
Glances humanly about the room, struck by odd "types" in this temporary hostelry.

Her mother, openly aloof, frowns a rebuke, unseen.
Two pairs of eyes meet across the dim length of the dining room.
A glad scarlet streams into the girl's already sun-burned cheeks.
"Don't you remember, mother? We met him at the art exhibit."
"My memory fails me. So should yours. He is a nobody. One of the impossibles!"
"But mother"——
"That is enough! You are not to remember him. I am your mother. You understand."
A breath of ice tempers the fierce glow of the simmering noon.
The crispness of the dining room turns limp, though not with heat.
Sparks that leaped from eye to eye drop like black ashes into the meaningless hour.
A vast wave of negation washes over that scene,
Wiping its golden characters from the sand forever.

Yonder at a corner table, surreptitiously powdering her face,
Blushes the village beauty, smitten with awe and envy.
Her sister from the Town, aping the country, disdains powder, preferring an "honest tan."
Behold the country lassie, aping the city, plastering her face with concealing cornstarch!
How wonderful to live as She lives. . . . .
She, with the retinue of maids and servants;
The country house and the town house; the yacht; the many automobiles.
What vague sophistication in her hat; the lines of her skirt; the pose of her head. . . .
Oh, to be born like that! Oh, to be free! Free from the sordidness of country living. . . .

Now SHE is rising from table. Now they are all going. . . .
How glorious to be whizzed away in a splendid touring car. . . .
Off toward the sunset and the unnamable glamor!
How dreadful to go back to her little cottage
Next door to the post office and general grocery!
How ghastly to live on day after day, her only diversion
Watching the country laborers and their families
Purchasing soda and ice cream cones at the corner drug store.
The boredom of it! The miseryof it! Oh, to be free!

The girl in the touring car had tears on her eyelashes.
The burning scarlet had come back to her cheeks.
"Mother, you treat me like a baby instead of a woman!
Even my thoughts are padlocked. . . .
My every glance is guarded.
And jailers watch my faintest smile.
Look at that little village girl . . . worshipped by the village boys,
Free as a bird, to make what friends she will.
What do I care for riches I want to be free!"

Mr. Perkins To His Secretary—$50,000

And $6,000 A Year For Life. A Good Example, Much Needed. May Other Business Men Follow It

(New York Journal)

George W. Perkins worked himself to death, and did much good work while he lived.

The newspapers said that he left none of his fortune to philanthropy. They are mistaken.

He dealt justly with his secretary, Miss Kihm, who had worked beside him for twenty-seven years. He gave her $50,000 outright, and in addition an income of $6,000 a year as long as she might live.

The example which Mr. Perkins puts before other business men in thus treating decently and justly a woman who had devoted all of her working years to his interests, is a great deal more useful to Real Philanthropy than would have been the giving of a million to an orphan asylum or another million to an old gentlemen's home.

The world needs more justice. Supply that and it can get along with less charity.

Mr. Perkins treated his secretary only justly. There is no doubt that of the millions left by Mr. Perkins some would have been missing, his heirs would not have got them but for the faithful work of conservation and detailed attention that his secretary gave to his interests.

The world in general, business men themselves, do not realise what they owe in this day of intense business concentration to women that as private secretaries, stenographers and in many other capacities work beside them.

It isn't necessary to enumerate disagreeable features of the work that such women do. Often the brunt of employers' shortcomings, bad temper, short hours and inefficiency falls upon the secretaries and stenographers.

The suavity and politeness shown in dealing with "customers" and other business men is too often lacking when it comes to dealing with the woman worker, who is entitled to all the politeness shown other women and to additional politeness because she earns it.

Consider not the negative, patient, enduring side of a private secretary's work, but what she actually accomplishes, and especially what she adds to the modern business man's efficiency.

She reminds him in a year of a thousand things; to forget any one of them might cast him money, Would cost him time and trouble.

She attends to innumerable details that are not "beneath" him, but beyond his reach and capacity.

Each man can do so much and no more; can remember and attend to so many things and no more.

Many a man has at his elbow in his business office a woman whose mind in many lines of his own business is superior to his.

And few men realise the difficulties that would face them if conditions in this world were as they should be, if every good woman were in her house bringing up her own children instead of wasting life on some man's money-making enterprise, she to be completely forgotten by him in his will, completely ignored by the heirs getting the fortune she helped to accumulate.

The work of private secretary and stenographer is at best discouraging, poorly paid, leading nowhere.

Over the doorway that leads to the stenographer's and private secretary's career, you might well write Dante's words, "Leave hope behind you that enter."

The business man says, "Be sure to remind me of so and so." She reminds him. He makes a thousand or ten thousand. She gets her usual few dollars at the end of the week.

Every day that he devotes to successful business sees him up higher on the ladder of financial safety and independence.

Each day sees his secretary just about where she started years before.

Every business man should have, if he can get it, a faithful, competent secretary. And every other business man should consider himself disgraced, and the community should consider him disgraced, if he ignores such a helper in his will.

Mr. Perkins has set a good example, he has put justice to a faithful helper ahead of showy philanthropy, and so he gets this "conspicuous notice," which he would not have got if, instead of leaving $50,000 to a good, earnest woman, he had left a million to some philanthropic generalisation.

The Rhyming Optimist

Quite often plain words suit me well for all I want to say; with only simple tales to tell, I've plenty of material to tide me through the day. As long as things keep moving on in their accustomed mode, I do not need to call upon additions to the lexicon or any signal code. But it is when I strike a snag and things are on the blink, vocabularies seem to lag; of Webster then I never brag—he was a feeble gink. For, lo! in all the book he wrote (which some consider great) there's not a single word I note that half the anguish can denote of my afflicted state. For when I hammer on my thumb, strong language is my choice. On such the lexicon is dumb, and yet if I would not succumb, I needs must use my voice. And when I tread upon a tack there's much that must be said. Alas! I find a woeful lack of words to bring to the attack in any book I've read. Yes, simple words will not avail in an emergency, and this is when I gladly hail the speech that's never known to fail, old man Profanity. When I am in an awful mess, a wild and tearful state, from out the depths of my duress I send my sizzling S O S in purest Billingsgate. I would not want my little boy to hear my shocking spell. The preacher, too, it would annoy, for ah! the terms that I employ would make your blood congeal. But that we need profanity I always shall maintain, for lacking it, where would we be when foozling at the final tee or when we miss a train?

Poincare Defends Claims Of France

Answers German Charges That Her Aim Is Ruin And Enslavement Of Germany

Paris, July 4.—It was not France that had the idea of going to find a cure for the troubles of Europe in the beneficial waters of Spa, declares ex-President Poincare in an article which will appear in tomorrow's Matin. But, he adds, France will loyally do everything she can to make the general consultation a success so long as the terms of the dearly-bought treaty, signed by all the world a year ago, are not sacrificed.

The ex-President has no such confidence in the Germans. Chancellor Fehrenbach and the rest, he declares, all agree with Treitschke's dictum, "All treaties are signed with mental reserves," and now is the time for them to try to get the treaty revised to fit their mental reservations.

"Encouraged by the concession she has already obtained," M. Poincare writes, "Germany is getting ready to ask for new ones. She is trying to move us to pity for the fate of her taxpayers and for the state of her industries. She wants us to give up the coal and surrender the mining districts of Upper Silesia, to be allowed to keep an army of 200,000 men, to be assured supplies of raw material and to have the period of occupation and the number of troops on the left bank of the Rhine reduced.

"In her campaign for these ends she is trying to blacken France in the eyes of other nations. France, the chorus of the German newspapers declare, is blinded by passion for gold, she does not consider the war at an end, and dreams still of annexation of the Rhineland. She wishes to disarm and ruin Germany and to enslave her."

At many of these charges, M. Poincare continues, one can shrug one's shoulders, but some he takes pains to controvert. In the peace negotiations, he declares, France never asked for a square mile of land against the wishes of the people. She would never have drawn the sword to recover Alsace-Lorraine had not Germany provoked a quarrel, and she didn't even ask that the Alsatian frontier should be that of 1814.

"If she wishes to disarm Germany, it is only to be able herself to live for the future in security and to reduce the burden of her own military charges," he says.

"If she is to indemnified for the loss she suffered, it is not from the evil purpose of ruining and humiliating Germany, but only that she herself should be able to live."

The future, he declares, lies with the German delegates at Spa. If they will act honorably in repairing the damage done by wanton aggression and try to make amends to the nation they tried to destroy, there will be real peace and economic collaboration. It remains for the Germans to decide.
